

The Global Justice Now magazine 'Ninety Nine' is mailed to 6,500 members.

Ninety-Nine magazine ('challenging the power of the 1%') comes out three times a year and keeps members informed about movements against inequality and corporate power all over the world. It keeps members up to date about the progress of campaigns and includes reviews, and cultural and comment features.

Global Justice Now is a democratic social justice organisation working as part of a global movement to challenge the powerful and create a more just and equal world. They mobilise people in the UK for change, and act in solidarity with those fighting injustice, particularly in the global south.

To help fund their work Global Justice Now now take loose inserts in Ninety Nine magazine.

What Global Justice Now Do

Achieving economic and social justice requires big changes in the world. Through their campaigns, they are building a movement to achieve that kind of change. These include opposing trade agreements such as the US-EU trade deal (TTIP) and the takeover of Africa's food and farming by big business. To achieve these things they:

Amplify the voices of people fighting the corporate takeover of their resources around the world, and build support for the democratic alternatives they are creating.

Forge a community for change here in Britain by helping to foster local activist groups, build alliances, organise events and educate people about the causes of injustice.

Use their influence as UK citizens to change UK government policy and counter the power of big business.

The aim of everything they do is to help ordinary people across the world reclaim power and make the big changes needed to achieve economic and social justice.
